Terrazzo

Example of a flat hob hood

Composition: A mix of aggregates (marble, glass, etc.) and a binder (cement or epoxy).

Appearance: Distinctive, speckled look with varied color options.

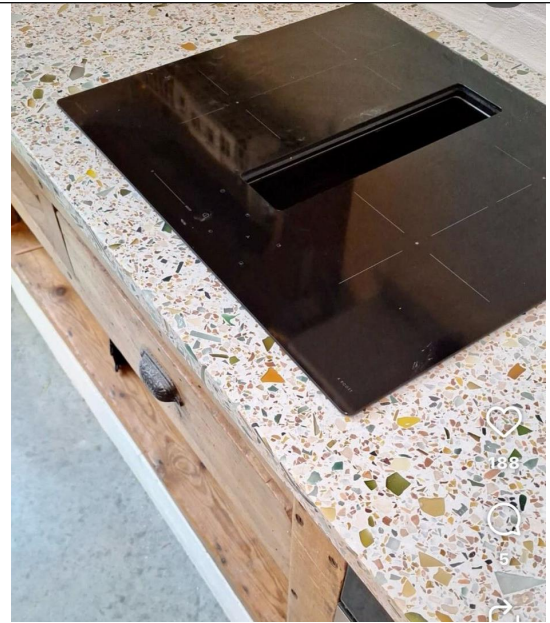

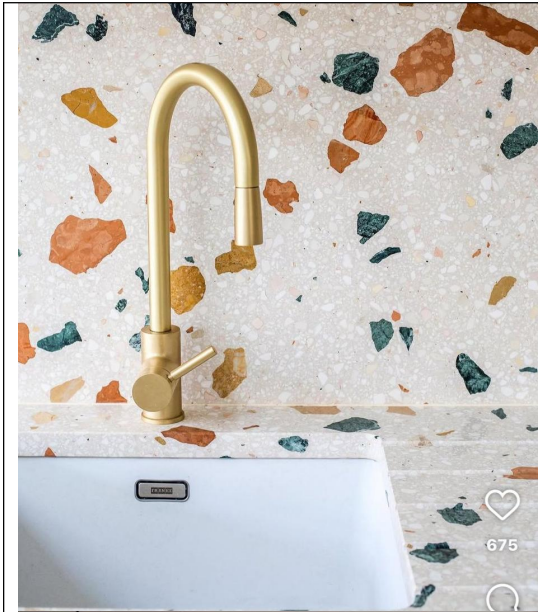

Finish:
Can be polished for a high sheen, or honed/matte for better slip resistance, such as in bathrooms.

Methods: Available as "poured-in-place" for seamless, large areas or as precast tiles.

A popular Italian style of stone made of an aggregate of natural stone, terrazzo has the unique benefit of being possible to install "in one piece"; in other words, a large piece of stone made specially to fit a space without seams or grout lines. In addition to being sleek and luxurious, it boasts durability, sustainability, low-maintenance, scratch resistance, water resistance and more. Its longevity alone makes this aggregate stone an incredible investment for your home or business. We offer terrazzo in both resin and cement form, the former of which being perfect for bathroom and kitchen interiors.

As a kitchen surface conglomerate is an excellent choice. An engineered stone, made from 90% natural materials with 10% resin, it is durable, resilient and lighter to handle than full marble or granite countertops. There's also a nod to the environment as conglomerate often uses what would otherwise be seen as waste materials.
